Got Gas?

I'll admit it. I've done some absent-minded things with my car. I've locked the keys inside, left the lights on all day, driven off with a drink on the roof ... Aw shucks, I even left a chocolate bar on the dashboard one hot day (which I craftily blamed on the kids).  But I've never, I repeat never, been so lost in space that I forgot to take the nozzle out before driving away from the gas station.

Only thing I could think of is that this guy set the "hands-free" switch thingy on the pump handle and went to wash his windows. When he finished with the windows, he must have just gotten in his car and started driving. Still....

Hey folks, we all do dumb things from time to time. All I ask is that you be alert and follow through with the task you started. Those absent-minded "mini-mishaps" are just a baby step away from a bigger one.

p.s.  Did you remember to turn the iron off before you left the house? How about the coffee pot or cup warmer before you left work?